Strong confidence in reaching targets Fair Value 1670p (+19%)

BU

From a meeting with management last Friday we are back with strong confidence in reaching 2016 targets for double-digit core EPS growth. Momentum is improving. GSK is a BUY for the start of 2016.

- During a breakfast meeting with management, we addressed the following key topics:
- CHC a significant part of the meeting was dedicated to this business. GSK is pleased with how the business is developing and is absolutely convinced it will achieve profitability at least in line with peers. It confirmed the target for 20% operating margin by the end of the decade (11.3% in 2015). A lot has been done to improve manufacturing efficiency both at former GSK and Novartis sites. Two minor disruptions remain and very good OTIF scores are now achieved (about 96%) since quality remediation team from Pharmaceuticals has taken care of CHC. Average quality has also been improved by switching one state-of-the-art facility from Pharma in Canada to the JV. A lot has also been done to reduce the complexity of the business and for instance the number of formulations of each brand whenever it was possible (Sensodyne brought down from about 50 to a handle). As to the question of whether the JV can achieve Reckitt's margins of 23-25%, Andrew Witty answered that at some point, it will have to decide whether to prioritise profit over revenue growth. When GSK reached its peak of 22%, top-line was growing only 2-3%. This balance is key mid-term.
- ViiV GSK has seen no change in the dynamics of dolutegravir-based regimens since Gilead has launched Genvoya for HIV-1 infections and sequentially is expecting new data with dolutegravir vs active comparators and further triple combinations. Later on, ViiV hopes to deliver dual therapies (able to circumvent resistance), long-acting drugs (like cabotegravir) and then maturation inhibitors for new combinations. With recent acquisitions from BMS, GSK now believes it is back into this HIV business with solid assets and clear milestones over the next 3-4 years.
- Respiratory Talking about respiratory was an opportunity for management which stressed how pricing has changed in recent years in the US. It has clearly become a key argument. GSK illustrated this statement by saying that its last six products launched in the US had had no premium over existing products. Breo's net price is currently lower than Advair's. The dynamics are good and since DTC campaign was launched to support the asthma indication last November, it has improved a lot. The focus in 2016 is to build share before generics come in. Concerning Nucala, GSK confirmed it does not expect any price issue as it has been priced on par with Xolair's average pricing based on patient weight.
- Vaccines A word here to report that manufacturing issues in pediatric vaccines are not expected to resume fully before late 2016/early 2017 and have to do with an upgraded facility as well as with new facilities coming on stream. One objective with these new facilities is to reduce the number of reasons to stop production. Interestingly, GSK suggested it might benefit somewhat from Sanofi Pasteur's supply limitations in the US by prioritising some geographies over others.

VALUATION

- As everything looks well on track and maybe sometimes ahead of schedule, the question was then asked as to why double-digit growth in core EPS in 2016 would be limited to 10%. The answer was suggestive of some room to exceed this level. The two arguments supportive of guidance are: (i) confirmation of a recovery in emerging markets and if countries like India are doing well, it is still tough in Latin America and in the Middle East for macroeconomic reasons; (ii) see Advair's dynamic in the US where GSK said it would be reasonable to expect another 20% drop in sales but the group would like to be sure no competitor takes a desperate attitude during the course of 2016.
- After this meeting, we have taken a more aggressive view on CHC margins, to the expense of Pharma but with no change in net numbers, thus leaving the FV unchanged.

Bryan Garnier stock rating system

For the purposes of this Report, the Bryan Garnier stock rating system is defined as follows:

Stock rating

BUY

Positive opinion for a stock where we expect a favourable performance in absolute terms over a period of 6 months from the publication of a recommendation. This opinion is based not only on the FV (the potential upside based on valuation), but also takes into account a number of elements that could include a SWOT analysis, momentum, technical aspects or the sector backdrop. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.

NEUTRAL

Opinion recommending not to trade in a stock short-term, neither as a BUYER or a SELLER, due to a specific set of factors. This view is intended to be temporary. It may reflect different situations, but in particular those where a fair value shows no significant potential or where an upcoming binary event constitutes a high-risk that is difficult to quantify. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.

SELL

Negative opinion for a stock where we expect an unfavourable performance in absolute terms over a period of 6 months from the publication of a recommendation. This opinion is based not only on the FV (the potential downside based on valuation), but also takes into account a number of elements that could include a SWOT analysis, momentum, technical aspects or the sector backdrop. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.
