The conference call yesterday afternoon confirmed a mixed first read-out from the first-quarter performance as reflected in the press release. There were some positive one-offs during Q1 and the remainder of the year is expected to show some tougher conditions in pharmaceuticals and in crop sciences. Updates on the pipeline also revealed several setbacks that add to questions about mid-term growth prospects. In all, we are left with a very mixed feeling and NEUTRAL therefore looks like the best rating to have on the stock.

ANALYSIS

- Clearly during the rush time that characterises each and every quarterly publication, especially with Bayer that comes out late and in various written formats, it is not always easy to identify R&D updates lost in the middle of a quarterly report. This is what happened yesterday the report already mentioned the discontinuation of roniciclib in SCLC and the refocus of finerenone on the DKD indication while CHF is not to be pursued. Later on during the conference call, the CEO added that vericiguat missed its primary endpoint in phase II in CHF with pEF but confirmed that it would proceed to phase III in CHF with rEF in collaboration with Merck whereas, despite positive top-line data but considering the competitive environment, all options would be evaluated for molidustat (which is suggestive of either collaboration or pure sale). Although we welcome some of these decisions that are financially responsive, like finerenone in CHF and molidustat considering more advanced similar drugs at AstraZeneca and GSK, all combined they are questioning the depth and breadth of Bayer's R&D pipeline to sustain longer-term growth for its pharmaceutical business. Bayer is obviously the company in our universe for which we have the least value for the pipeline. Asked about how management was qualifying this portfolio and whether it would need to intensify partnerships and M&A activities, notably in oncology, the answer was that the pipeline is "very strong" in all three areas where Bayer has decided to focus i.e. cardiology, women's health and even oncology where it will simply not participate in the first wave of IO.
- In concrete terms, today's updates have little impact on our numbers and FV as we were already very cautious about these assets. Roniciclib was not factored into our model, finerenone was only included in DKD (and so remains as such) and only molidustat is removed but had very limited projected sales as a third entrant into the market with limited available clinical data.
- Now, moving back to the quarterly performance, we would highlight the fact that Bayer stuck to its original guidance as a consequence of a lack of visibility towards the rest of the year in some areas and also because there were some one-offs in the Q1 performance, particularly in CropScience where price effects mostly related to seeds and to canola are not recurring, which is also true for the mix effect in COGS. In Pharmaceuticals, Bayer warned about upcoming pricing cuts in Japan and in China for the remainder of the year, about the changing situation for Stivarga in Germany and the profit-sharing status of Eylea. We think there is a layer of cautiousness in Bayer's management comments and guidance for the full-year, in view of the arrival of a new CEO who probably prefers to beat consensus numbers rather than missing them but the margin is not as big as Q1 might suggest.

VALUATION

- The Slight improvement in EBITDA margins for Pharmaceuticals and CropScience this year vs our initial expectations on one side and revenue cuts and molidustat's removal on the other, balance each other out in the end, such that our FV is unchanged.
- Our FV remains in line with the current share price. Bayer remains a NEUTRAL.

Bryan Garnier stock rating system

For the purposes of this Report, the Bryan Garnier stock rating system is defined as follows:

Stock rating

BUY	Positive opinion for a stock where we expect a favourable performance in absolute terms over a period of 6 months from the publication of a recommendation. This opinion is based not only on the FV (the potential upside based on valuation), but also takes into account a number of elements that could include a SWOT analysis, momentum, technical aspects or the sector backdrop. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.
NEUTRAL	Opinion recommending not to trade in a stock short-term, neither as a BUYER or a SELLER, due to a specific set of factors. This view is intended to be temporary. It may reflect different situations, but in particular those where a fair value shows no significant potential or where an upcoming binary event constitutes a high-risk that is difficult to quantify. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.
SELL	Negative opinion for a stock where we expect an unfavourable performance in absolute terms over a period of 6 months from the publication of a recommendation. This opinion is based not only on the FV (the potential downside based on valuation), but also takes into account a number of elements that could include a SWOT analysis, momentum, technical aspects or the sector backdrop. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.
