LVMH's H1 2016 results are globally in line with investors' expectations. Sales grew 4% organically in H1 (+4% in Q2 vs +3% in Q1) while consensus was expecting +3%. H1 EBIT remained almost stable at EUR2.95bn (consensus: EUR2.94bn), so H1 margin was down 50bp to 17.2%. We remain at Buy on the stock with an unchanged EUR171 FV. LVMH is one of our favourite stocks in our luxury sample.

ANALYSIS

- LVMH reported H1 2016 sales at EUR17.18bn (consensus: EUR17.03bn), up 3% and 4% organically (consensus: +3%). This implies a slight acceleration versus Q1 (+3%). We want to highlight the sales stability in H1 and +1% in Q2 for the Fashion & Leather division following stability in Q1. Louis Vuitton revenues were likely up around 2% in H1, in line with the Q1 performance. While Fendi and Céline revenues performed well with clear growth (particularly at Fendi), Donna Karan and Marc Jacobs sales were significantly down. On the other hand, Wines & Spirits business performance was very positive (+9% in H1 and +13% in Q2 alone). Q2 momentum was driven by Hennessy (+16%) but also by Champagne (+9%). In Mainland China, Hennessy sales recovered particularly for XO, it is true on an easy comparison basis. In H1, Champagne volumes were up 3% (solid performance in Europe and in US) and Cognac volumes were up 13% also partly thanks to a strong performance in US (mainly VS market). It is worth noting also that Selective Retail was quite resilient (+5% in H1 and above all +7% in Q2) thanks to Sephora, for instance, which posted double-digit sales growth at comparable stores in US and Middle East. As expected, DFS was affected by Hong Kong's double-digit decrease (despite traffic up). Lastly, Perfumes & Cosmetics and Watches & Jewelry were both buoyant in H1 with respective 8% and 4% organic sales growth, despite some slowdown in Q2 for watches, and very encouraging performance at Tag Heuer and Bulgari (albeit at a less extend).
- By geographical area, we want to highlight the better trend in Asia-Pacific in Q2 (+3% vs -2% in Q1). This was thanks to a clear improvement in Mainland China, particularly at Hennessy and Louis Vuitton (mid single digit growth), and despite the still-very-tough situation in Hong Kong. In addition, there was also a clear deceleration in Europe (+3% vs +7% in Q1) which is not very surprising given fewer tourists, particularly in France, but business remained satisfactory with locals clientele. In Japan too, sales growth slowed down in Q2 (-5% vs +6% in Q1), there also due to lower Chinese Tourists following stronger JPY. In Americas, sales increased 7% in H1 and in Q2, implying some slight acceleration vs Q1 (+6%) thanks to Sephora and Hennessy.
- H1 EBIT remained almost stable at EUR2.95bn (consensus: EUR2.94bn), implying some profitability erosion (-50bp to 17.2%). The slight margin decline is the consequence of deterioration at the Fashion & Leather division (-30bp to 27.7%), but LV profitability remained almost the same and US brands Marc Jacobs and Donna Karan still registered losses (higher than in H1 15). Selective Retail also registered a significant profitability decline (-60bp to 7.5%), mainly driven (unsurprisingly) by DFS. On the other hand, EBIT margin improved at W&S division (+250bp to 27.5%) thanks to Hennessy sales strong performance (Cognac margin gained around 400bp). Perfumes & Cosmetics profitability remained unchanged and Watches & Jewelry's declined slightly (-50bp to 7.5%).
- We leave unchanged our FY 2016 expectations with 4% organic sales growth, including +1% for Fashion & Leather division. FY EBIT margin should be down 10bp on FY at 18.4%. Furthermore, management does not rule out implementing a share buyback in H2, even if no decision has been taken at this stage.

VALUATION

- We remain at Buy on the stock with an unchanged EUR171 FV. LVMH remains one of our favourite stocks (alongside Hermès and Kering) in our luxury sample. H1 LVMH results highlight again the group's resilient status, as it is very well balanced both by geographical area and by business activity. Furthermore, despite an increasingly challenging environment, Louis Vuitton resisted well. The stock is trading with a 7% discount vs peers average.

NEXT CATALYSTS

- Q3 sales to be reported mid October.

Bryan Garnier stock rating system

For the purposes of this Report, the Bryan Garnier stock rating system is defined as follows:

Stock rating

BUY	Positive opinion for a stock where we expect a favourable performance in absolute terms over a period of 6 months from the publication of a recommendation. This opinion is based not only on the FV (the potential upside based on valuation), but also takes into account a number of elements that could include a SWOT analysis, momentum, technical aspects or the sector backdrop. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.
NEUTRAL	Opinion recommending not to trade in a stock short-term, neither as a BUYER or a SELLER, due to a specific set of factors. This view is intended to be temporary. It may reflect different situations, but in particular those where a fair value shows no significant potential or where an upcoming binary event constitutes a high-risk that is difficult to quantify. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.
SELL	Negative opinion for a stock where we expect an unfavourable performance in absolute terms over a period of 6 months from the publication of a recommendation. This opinion is based not only on the FV (the potential downside based on valuation), but also takes into account a number of elements that could include a SWOT analysis, momentum, technical aspects or the sector backdrop. Every subsequent published update on the stock will feature an introduction outlining the key reasons behind the opinion.
